

END-OF-TERM TEST LISTENING SCRIPT

Roger: Hey, Leslie, I'm going to make some lunch. Would you like some salad and a sandwich?

Leslie: That sounds great. I'm really hungry. But do we have any bread for sandwiches?

Roger: I don't think so, Leslie. I guess we won't have any sandwiches. Can we use your salad dressing?

Leslie: Sure. What kind is mine? I always forget what I buy.

Roger: Let me look... It's a bottle of ranch dressing.

Leslie: Oh, good, I like that kind. Let's have soup, too. There should be some in the refrigerator.

Roger: I don't think there's enough soup. I ate some last night for dinner.

Leslie: Oh, well. I'm on a diet. I really shouldn't eat too much, but after going to the gym, I'm so hungry. Hey Roger, do you want to go shopping after lunch?

Roger: I can't. You know I have to work on a paper.

Leslie: Yes, I know. And how many times do I have to tell you: You ought to work on your paper later! Come with me!

Roger: What are you shopping for?

Leslie: Shoes. I want to buy some sandals like the black pair Ericka has. Hers are so pretty.

Roger: Well, I don't need women's shoes. Where are you going? Do you think they have men's shoes?

Leslie: To City Feet. And, yea, I'm sure they'll have men's shoes. It's the best shoe store in our city. A friend first told me about it. She buys all her shoes there. Anyway, City Feet is great because the prices are very reasonable. I think maybe Ericka got her black sandals there.

Roger: Oh yea, I like her sandals. How much money do you think she paid for them?

Leslie: Not a lot at City Feet. Their discounts are really good. They have the lowest prices in this city.

Roger: If their prices are that cheap, maybe I'll buy a few pairs of shoes. (pause) Umm, but I don't think I actually have enough money for that. I'll join you for a little bit, but then I have to come home and study.

Leslie: Great! Let's eat fast and head out.
