Quick Facts about Dreaming

When we sleep, we see, hear, and feel things in our heads. These are our dreams. Here are answers to a few questions about dreaming.

When do people usually dream?

People mostly dream during REM sleep. REM means rapid eye movement. REM or deep sleep first starts about one hour after we fall asleep. But this first REM is very short—only a few minutes long. Then, every 90 minutes, we have another REM sleep. The REM sleep becomes longer every time. In a normal night, we have this kind of sleep for two hours.

Why do some people have dreams, but others don't?

Scientists believe that everyone dreams. However, many people do not remember their dreams after they wake up. These people think that they do not dream, but they really do.

Why do people dream?

There are many different answers to this question. Many cultures have their own traditions about the meaning of dreams. And scientists have many ideas about why people dream, too. But people do not agree on the reasons for dreaming. So, there isn't a good answer yet. It's a mystery.
