READINGPART 6*Read the article. Then choose the correct answers.

What's America's favorite food? A new survey says it is steak. Surprised that it's not pizza or hamburgers? Pizza came in fourth place and hamburgers were thirteenth.

The survey, conducted by the International Food and Restaurant Society reported the fifty foods people in the United States like most. Researchers asked 2,300 people to share their three favorite foods.

Several fruits were on the list. Apples were not as popular as you might think: The most popular fruit was avocado, and the second most popular was pineapple, with pineapple at twenty-seventh on the list. Other fruits on the list included bananas, strawberries, grapes, and mangoes. The most popular vegetable was asparagus, followed by corn and mushrooms. Though corn was on list, perhaps surprisingly, popcorn was not.

The only Asian food to make it on the list was sushi, which was twelfth on the list. And what fish do people in the U.S. enjoy eating most? Salmon was the favorite, and fewer people said tuna, which was second most popular for fish, and twenty-sixth place on the list.

One of the more interesting findings was that cheddar cheese is considered to be less delicious than mozzarella cheese.

Do you want to find out more about each country's favorites? Information on other countries is coming soon, so check out the International Food and Restaurant Society's website to find out what people like in your country.

PART 7Read the passage. Then choose the correct answers.

San Francisco, “the City by the Bay,” and its surrounding cities are home to thousands of people, restaurants, and businesses. Sometimes referred to as the San Francisco Bay Area and located in California, the area around San Francisco has had many different names and many different people living there over thousands of years.

The earliest people to live in the area came over 5,000 years ago. These peoples were known as the Ohlone, and they used the large bay as a natural resource for food and water. Spanish explorers found the Ohlone and the land now known as the San Francisco Bay Area in the late 1700s. There, they established a place called Mission San Francisco de Asis, and the area became a part of Spain. Years later, in 1821, this area became part of Mexico after Mexico became independent of Spain. For the next 29 years, the city was called Yerba Buena, and Mexican Mayor, Francisco de Haro began developing the city. Yerba Buena had only a small population, and it was not until 1848—the same year that the United States took control of this region—that the population began to increase. And it increased fast. From 1848 to 1849, Yerba Buena’s population grew from about 1,000 to over 25,000 people. The reason for this increase was gold. It was discovered in the mountains east of Yerba Buena in 1848, and almost immediately, people from all over rushed to find it. Two years later, the government changed the name of Yerba Buena to San Francisco, and with all the money and trade brought by the “gold rush,” San Francisco quickly became the biggest city in the western United States. It was a center for trade and finance—two things that San Francisco is still known for.

Today, the San Francisco Bay Area is one of the most economically important cities in the United States. It is still a center of finance and trade, but the focus of trade has switched from gold to computers. The city has recently become home to thousands of computer engineers and software developers. These people commute each day to Silicon Valley, the home of the United States’ technology industry. While the jobs of its people have changed, in less than 200 years, San Francisco has grown from a small town to an influential city.

1 The main focus of the passage is San Francisco’s _____.

- A history
- B population
- C businesses

2 According to the passage, in 1848, why did people move to the area that is now known as San Francisco?

- A because it became part of the United States
- B because gold was found near the city
- C because there were a lot of jobs there

NAME _____ DATE _____

3 According to the last paragraph, what makes San Francisco important today?

- A the money from the gold rush
- B the size of its population
- C the technology industry

4 According to the passage, Yerba Buena was NEVER a part of _____.

- A Spain
- B Mexico
- C the United States

5 Who were the first people to come to the area now known as San Francisco?

- A the Ohlone
- B the Spanish
- C the Mexicans

Your good friend has a lot of stress. He works 35 hours per week and also goes to graduate school at night. He always has a lot of work, and rarely has time to enjoy himself. Additionally, he has a roommate that is difficult to live with. The roommate plays music loudly at night and never cleans, so your friend has difficulty studying and always has to clean. Your friend asks for your advice and opinions on these issues. Imagine that you are talking to your friend. Tell him what he can do to solve his problems and have less stress.

WRITING

PART 11

*Make the world a better place.
Take personal responsibility.
People who want to hurt others will only hurt themselves.
Things are not always what they appear to be.*

People try to follow morals—rules for good behavior—in order to live life better. Read the list of morals above. Choose one and write a paragraph or two about it. In your response, consider:

- What does the moral mean?
- A personal experience that illustrates this moral: What happened? What was the result?
- How can you use this moral in the future?
