

UNIT 3 REVIEW TEST LISTENING SCRIPT

About a week ago while I was walking home from work, I witnessed a terrible car accident. It all happened around 6:30 p.m. while I was waiting to cross a street near my home. As the light was turning red, a car drove straight through the red light on the opposite side of the street and crashed into another car. I immediately ran over to the site of the accident and looked into the cars to see if the drivers were OK. They looked badly injured, but I could see that they were still breathing. I pulled out my cell phone and called an ambulance. Within five minutes, two ambulances arrived and they started helping the people in the cars. I waited to see if I could help, and while I was waiting, some police officers arrived. One of them questioned me about witnessing the event and I told them what happened. While I was talking to them, the ambulances took the drivers to the hospital.

I read about the accident in the local newspaper the next day, and the article said that one of the drivers was using a cell phone when the accident occurred. It also said that both drivers survived the accident but have major injuries. I feel quite lucky that I wasn't crossing to the other side of the street at the time, or I might be in the hospital too!
