READING

PART 3

Read the transcript of a weather report. Then choose the correct answers.

Jessica: Good evening. I'm Jessica Spears with your weekly weather report. For tomorrow, we couldn't ask for a better day for the first day back to work after the weekend! It's going to be 15 degrees Celsius on average and we're expecting clear blue skies throughout most of the day. However, there's still a 10 percent chance of showers in the evening. You may need to take your umbrella if you're coming home late.

Good weather is not going to last forever this week. Since it's been raining cats and dogs up north due to the cold front, temperatures might drop by as much as 10 degrees by Wednesday. With winds that could exceed 35 miles per hour at the same time, you should bundle up to avoid getting a cold or headache. The humid air from the east coast is moving quickly and it could reach the city by Thursday afternoon. We might experience heavy rains with some flurries on that day. You may want to stay warm and dry at home if you don't have to go out.

Towards the weekend, expect a rise in the temperature as high as 20 degrees. It's going to be mostly sunny and could be partly cloudy. It looks like a good time to enjoy some outdoor activities with friends and families. Now, stay tuned for local news!
