READING

PART 3

Read the magazine article. Then choose the correct answers.

Saving money while shopping in the U.S.

Shopping in the United States is a great pastime, but department stores can often be expensive. However, if you look hard enough, you can find many options that are suitable for the budget shopper.

Thrift stores, where people bring the clothes and household items that they no longer want, are very popular in the U.S. Since they are used goods, the store sells them at a much lower price. And don't worry about getting someone's old things. Thrift stores usually have very high standards. If an item is in poor condition, they won't accept it. In fact, you can often find clothes that still have the price tag on them. Search online for thrift stores near you. Chances are you'll find one in nearly every city or town.

Yard sales are also popular in the U.S. In rural and suburban neighborhoods, residents love to periodically clear out the things they have collected over the years, such as furniture, clothes, or books. Maybe their kids have grown and moved out or maybe they are selling their house. They put everything they want to get rid of in their yard, driveway, or garage and decide on a cheap price for it. Other people in the neighborhood stop by to see if they can pick up something for a good price.

The final option is not as much fun, but chances are better that you'll find exactly what you're looking for. It's simple: just search online for people who are selling the items you are interested in. People often sell things online when they're moving from one apartment to another, so they don't have so much to pack. They may live in an apartment without a garage or yard, so they can't have a yard sale. You'll find a lot of people selling things online in big cities such as New York and San Francisco.

Here are some tips for budget shopping:

- Go to a thrift store only when you have a lot of time to spend, and be patient. You may have to look through a large amount of merchandise before you find the treasure you're looking for.
- Grab a local newspaper on a warm spring or summer weekend, and you'll probably find two or three yard sales going on in any given residential neighborhood.
- Take precautions when going to someone's home to make a purchase. Speak to the person on the phone first, and take a friend with you.
- Bring cash to yard sales and don't be afraid to bargain!

1 Which of the following best summarizes the main ideas presented in the article?

- A People should stop paying full price for items.
- B There are many options for people who want to save money when they shop.
- C People who love shopping in department stores will also love thrift stores and yard sales.
