REVIEW TEST: UNIT 21GRAMMAR*PART 1

Choose the correct answers to complete the conversation.

Mary: Hi, Rodrigo. If I (1) ask / will ask / had asked for your advice, will you keep it a secret?

Rodrigo: Sure, Mary. I won't tell anyone.

Mary: I got offered a job writing a blog for the marketing department of a huge, multinational company, but I don't know if I should take it.

Rodrigo: Why not? It sounds perfect for you.

Mary: I know. If I take the job, I (2) 'll make / am making / making a lot more money than I do now.

Rodrigo: If you make more money, you (3) move / can move / are moving into a bigger apartment.

Mary: You're right. If I take the job, I (4) won't / may not / shouldn't have to work in my living room anymore. I'll have a nice office.

Rodrigo: So what's the problem?

Mary: The problem is, if I (5) work / had worked / have worked for a big company, I have to follow their rules.

Rodrigo: Oh, right. And if you follow their rules, you can't decide what you want to write about.

Mary: (6) If / Whenever / Unless I continue writing for myself, I will no longer be able to make my own creative decisions.

Rodrigo: What happens (7) if / even if / only if you take the job and you don't like it?

Mary: OK, you convinced me. I'm not going to take the job. Thanks for your help!

READINGPART 3*Read the blog post. Then choose the correct answers.

More young people than ever are taking a year off between high school and college. Often known as a “gap year,” this experience can be very fulfilling and also help guide those who are unsure of where their future should take them.

A number of people who take advantage of their time off from school decide to travel. They might backpack their way around Southeast Asia, or volunteer at a school in Central America. If young people take this path, it will certainly be memorable. For many young people, this will be their first experience living away from home, and even their first time abroad. When people face unfamiliar surroundings and are forced to take care of themselves, they usually come out of the experience more mature and with a greater sense of independence. And after seeing the world, people tend to have a more positive attitude, and a sense of compassion for others.

Andrea Davis is about to begin her freshman year of college, one year later than her friends. She spent a year after high school trying to figure out the best career path. She took a job as a waitress at a local restaurant, earning her own money for the first time in her life.

“Once I made enough money, I decided I wanted to travel,” said Andrea. She spent several months in France, studying the language, and taking cooking and art courses.

“Last year, I didn’t have a clear idea of what I wanted to go to college for, or even if I wanted to go. Now, I’m more confident in my future, and I know I want to be a translator for the United Nations.”

Heading out to unfamiliar countries is not the only option for a gap year. Some people decide to stay where they are and earn money and gain job skills by getting a job. Some people simply need a break from sitting behind a desk, so they can gain perspective and make important decisions. Getting out of the classroom sometimes helps people focus more on themselves, and maybe even discover a hidden passion they didn’t know they had. A word of caution, though. Plan your gap year carefully. Decide how you will spend your time, and make sure you are able to follow through on your plans.
