READING

PART 3

Read the email. Then choose the correct answers.

Dear Juliana,

Well, our first week of college is over, and just like I promised, I'm writing to give you a full report. I still can't believe we are no longer living next door to each other, walking to school together every day like we have since we were five years old. But I'm really excited that we'll have new stories to tell each other whenever we get together. For now, email will have to do.

I didn't have a very good first week at college. On the very first day of biology class, the professor gave us a quiz. On the first day! I guess we were supposed to have read something over the summer, but who does homework in the summer? If I knew what the next quiz was on, I would study so I could improve my grade. But the professor won't tell us what the quiz is on. If we come to class every day and take notes, he said, then his quizzes will be easy.

Alright, let me tell you about my roommate. She's very quiet and I don't know anything about her. I could get to know her better if she talked more, but she seems shy. The only thing I know is that we both like scary movies that make us scream, just like you and me (remember when we saw Monstertown and both of us had nightmares for a week?). That's the only thing I know about my roommate so far. I wish she would talk to me a little more.

Oh, there is something I'm really excited about. I'm taking a class called Fairy Tales and Princesses. Can you believe it? A university class where I get to read all my old favorite stories and then talk about what they mean from a cultural and psychological perspective. I can't wait to tell the class about how we wore our Cinderella dresses for two weeks straight when we were eight-years-old! I know you would love this class, and if you were here, you would take it, too. Actually, I had to get consent from my guidance counselor to take it because it's not in my major.

Speaking of majors, I'm not sure I want to be a biology major anymore. I know, I know! The hard sciences are where all the jobs are. That's what my parents have been telling me my whole life. But remember when we were younger, and I used to dream about being an actress? That dream has started coming back to me since I got here. I wish I knew what I wanted to do. My parents will be furious if I tell them I want to be an actress.

Well, that's it for now. Send me a long email with all your news when you get a chance.

Much love,
Jade
