READING

PART 3

Read the online discussion. Then choose the correct answers.

- Comment 08/25 00:23 [Marco92] I think in the future, people will be wishing they were back in the early 21st century. By the end of this century, there will be less food, less natural environment, and more pollution. Also, we won't be living by the sea anymore. Because of the threat of continuously rising sea levels, everyone will have to move to hills and mountains. I also think there will be more poverty, because the rich will keep their money and not share their wealth.
- Comment 08/25 01:56 [Matt58] @Marco92 You're too pessimistic! Of course we have problems now, but don't forget about the potential of technology to solve these problems. I think that by the end of this century, most people around the world will be living at a level of comfort that at the moment is only enjoyed by those in rich countries. And as the poorer countries become richer, there will be more universities, more scientists, more development in technology, and new ways of thinking to solve most of the problems you mentioned.
- Comment 08/25 14:36 [Xeno0086] I think trying to predict the future like this is a waste of time! We should be focusing on what is right in front of us; dealing with the problems that we face today. I don't know how people will be living in 100 years and neither do either of you. This kind of debate is not useful, and it distracts us from what we should be doing right now.
- Comment 08/29 01:16 [Matt58] @Xeno0086 I think discussions of this kind are important. If we have a clear idea of long-term trends and how these trends are going to develop, we can plan effectively now. For example, I think at the moment our main focus should be ending global poverty. This will have a number of huge future benefits as I mentioned.

WRITING

You are Neil92. Write a reply to the comment below. Write two or three paragraphs answering all the questions and showing the reasons for your thinking.

Comment 08/30 00:45 @[Neil92] How do you think people will be living 100 years from now? Will the world be very different from now? Do you think people will be healthier or not? Do you think we'll be living in buildings similar to those we live in now, or will they be different? Do you think in the future we will be able to solve some of the problems that we face now? If so, which problems?
