The City Art Museum could be closing its doors by the end of the year, according to museum director Marty Hall, if visits by patrons do not increase. A city law states that the museum (1) doesn't allow / is not allowed to / was not allow to remain open if it is losing money, which it is. Many people argue that the law (2) should be passed/ couldn't have been passed / shouldn't have been passed four years ago, but it was, and now it (3) must be / might be / mustn't be respected.

Art lovers and critics of the museum's administration say that it (4) should / might not / didn't have to come to this. They claim that the administration didn't do all it could to keep the museum profitable. "Art museums (5) suppose to / are supposed / are supposed to make money, aren't they?" asked Cheryl Rand, a city council board member. "There are many things Hall (6) must do / might do / could have done over the years to keep the number of visitors up, but he didn't. He (7) must be / have to / has got to try something different if he wants to rectify the situation and keep the museum open."

Hall said the museum is planning to expand its gift shop, which is usually more profitable than ticket sales. He also said that advertising could be a good way to bring more people to the museum. The city council and the
