PART 2

Choose the correct answer to complete the sentence.

Diane: Hi, Honey. You know I'm no neat-freak, but I do like a semblance of order. So, could you explain why the couch is in the kitchen? What happened?

Jim: Oh, I spilled juice on the carpet this morning, so I called the carpet cleaners and asked that someone (1) come / comes / will come right away. The guy recommended (2) I move / I moved / me to move the couch before he got here, so I had to move it all by myself.

NAME _____ DATE _____

Diane: I'm sorry. I (3) will help / would help / would have helped you (4) was I / had I been / if I have been home. Too bad I was at work at the time.

Jim: That's OK. So he cleaned the carpet, but it's essential that (5) we not / we don't / us not to walk on it until tomorrow morning. He insisted that we (6) stay / stayed / will stay off it until then.

ASK ROSA

Dear Rosa,

I'm recently married and things have not been going so great. A few months after our wedding, my husband was offered an amazing job in Toronto, and so, after a little discussion, I decided to quit my job, and we both moved out here. At first, Toronto was wonderful, but then Adam's amazing job started to seem less and less amazing. He's been working late more recently and comes home tired, and I feel like I never get to see him energetic and excited. I totally understand that his career is very important right now, especially since I'm unemployed, but had I known things would be like this, I would have stayed in Seattle. What do you think I should do?

Bryony P.

Dear Bryony,

First off, I think it's great that you were willing to show such commitment to your partner by moving with him to Toronto. Were I in your position, I'm not sure I would have had the courage to move! Now that you are there; however, it's important that your husband make time for you. I recommend that the two of you establish a weekly date night so that you always have at least one night each week exclusively for each other. Insist that Adam commit to that night every week—no excuses. Also, I think that you ought to find some things to fill your free time. I recommend that you either take some classes or join a book or athletic club, which will allow you to get out and meet people. Otherwise, you are just going to be thinking about how lonely you are and how boring it is to be waiting for Adam all the time.

ROSA

Dear Rosa,

My friend Sara has recently started dating a guy that I just can't stand. He is loud, offensive, and overbearing. He always interrupts her when she's talking and tries to tell her what to do. Clearly, I don't enjoy hanging out with him, but Sara insists that we all meet together instead of just the two of us. But what's worse is that he brings her down; I just look at Sara and can tell that she's not the same person when she's around him. She says she really likes him, so I don't know what to do. Should I tell her what I'm thinking? Please help!

Carly H.

NAME _____ DATE _____

Dear Carly,

That's not too uncommon of a problem, Carly. Plenty of people take issue with their friend's partners, but that's also one of the biggest reasons why people lose their friends. So, to maintain your friendship, it's essential that you approach the situation with care. Should Sara realize that those negative qualities you mentioned are in fact true of her new boyfriend, then she'll realize it soon enough, and you will be the friend that she comes to for advice. Remember that who she wants to be with is Sara's choice, not yours. However, her boyfriend might slowly be causing her problems without her really noticing the effects. If so, I recommend you tell her that you don't think he's right for her, but you'll want to really think through all the reasons why she'd be better off without him if you want her to listen. If not, you risk losing her as a friend completely. Be thoughtful of her feelings and best interests. She may be resistant at first, but eventually she will appreciate your honesty. Good luck!

ROSA

SPEAKING

PART 5

Read the conversation between Ryan and Elise. Then say what you think Ryan should do about his roommate. In your response, be sure to give advice about each problem you read, and support your ideas with good reasons. Use subjunctive constructions, inverted conditionals, and implied conditionals in your response.

Elise: Hey Ryan. How are things going with your new roommate?

Ryan: Ehh, not so good. He always plays music late at night, which keeps me up. He’s also a bit of a slob. He doesn’t clean up after himself, and that’s beginning to annoy me. And yesterday I came home and I found him hanging out in my room! What was he doing there?!? Had I known that he’d be such a problem, I certainly would not have let him live with me!

Elise: Wow. That seems like an extremely difficult living situation.

WRITING

PART 6

Your friend, Zeynep, has never traveled abroad before, but she is planning a trip overseas. She does not speak any languages besides English, and she is thinking of traveling alone. Think about what advice you would give her. Then write her an email that gives her advice about traveling. Use subjunctive constructions, inverted conditionals, and implied conditionals in your email.
