

| Word/Phrase     | Part of speech | IPA (UK)       | IPA (US)       | Definition                                                                                                                  | Sample sentence                                                                           |
|-----------------|----------------|----------------|----------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Feelings |                |                |                |                                                                                                                             |                                                                                           |
| courageous      | adjective      | kə'reɪdʒəs     |                | very brave and determined                                                                                                   | Frank fought a courageous battle to get his proposal through.                      |
| devastated      | adjective      | 'devəstetɪd    |                | feeling very shocked and upset                                                                                              | They were devastated to discover they had been robbed.                             |
| disgusted       | adjective      | dɪs'gʌstɪd     |                | feeling very angry and upset about something that you do not approve of                                                     | I was disgusted by the way he treated his guests.                                  |
| frustrated      | adjective      | frʌ'streɪtɪd   |                | feeling annoyed and impatient because you are prevented from achieving something                                            | Frustrated passengers have started to use other forms of transportation.           |
| grumpy          | adjective      | 'grʌmpi        |                | unhappy and dissatisfied, usually for no obvious reason                                                                     | He's always grumpy first thing in the morning.                                     |
| humbled         | adjective      | 'hʌmb(ə)ld     |                | to feel less important or proud because of something that has been achieved or suffered by someone else                     | We feel humbled by our local community's generosity and support.                   |
| hysterical      | adjective      | hɪ'sterɪk(ə)l  |                | behaving in an uncontrolled way because you are extremely excited, afraid or upset                                          | She wasn't hysterical , just crying.                                               |
| indifferent     | adjective      | ɪn'dɪfrənt     |                | lacking interest in something, or lacking sympathy with someone                                                             | It's easy to be indifferent to money when you've never been poor.                  |
| resilient       | adjective      | rɪ'zɪliənt     | rɪ'zɪljənt     | able to quickly become healthy, happy or strong again after an illness, disappointment or other problem                     | I've always been impressed with how resilient she is in the face of difficulties.  |
| superior        | adjective      | sʊ'piəriə(r)   | sʊ'piəriə      | someone who is superior behaves in a proud way, as if they think they are better or more important than other people        | I can't stand that superior smile of his.                                          |
| Polysemy |                |                |                |                                                                                                                             |                                                                                           |
| application     | noun           | ,æplɪ'keɪʃ(ə)n |                | a formal request for permission to do or have something                                                                     | I'm supposed to submit my application before the end of the week.                  |
| application     | noun           | ,æplɪ'keɪʃ(ə)n |                | a particular use that something has                                                                                         | The technology has a lot of practical applications to help with everyday tasks.    |
| competition     | noun           | ,kɒmpə'tɪʃ(ə)n | ,kəmpə'tɪʃ(ə)n | the activities of people who are trying to get something that other people also want; rivalry                               | The competition for jobs is fiercer than ever.                                     |
| competition     | noun           | ,kɒmpə'tɪʃ(ə)n | ,kəmpə'tɪʃ(ə)n | an organized event in which people try to win prizes by being better than other people                                      | They should have a good chance of winning the competition .                        |
| condition       | noun           | kən'dɪʃ(ə)n    |                | the weather, especially when it is bad                                                                                      | The storm brought freezing conditions across much of the country.                  |
| condition       | noun           | kən'dɪʃ(ə)n    |                | something that must be true or be done before another thing can happen, especially as part of an agreement, law or contract | It is a condition of his release that he stays in contact with his parole officer. |

| Word/Phrase         | Part of speech | IPA (UK)       | IPA (US)    | Definition                                                                                     | Sample sentence                                                            |
|---------------------|----------------|----------------|-------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| land                | verb           | lænd           |             | to bring a plane down to the ground                                                            | The pilot was able to land the plane safely.                        |
| land                | verb           | lænd           |             | to get something that you wanted, especially a job or opportunity                              | He was hoping to land the job on a permanent basis.                 |
| pressure            | noun           | 'preʃə(r)      | 'preʃər     | a worried feeling that you get when you have to deal with a difficult or complicated situation | With greatly increased workloads, everyone is under pressure now.   |
| pressure            | noun           | 'preʃə(r)      | 'preʃər     | a force pressing on someone or something                                                       | She became conscious of the pressure of his hand on her shoulder.   |
| sick                | adjective      | sɪk            |             | if you are sick, you do not feel well                                                          | He stayed at home caring for his sick wife.                         |
| sick                | adjective      | sɪk            |             | very unhappy about or bored or tired of something                                              | I am sick of listening to your complaints.                          |
| Intensifiers |                |                |             |                                                                                                |                                                                            |
| altogether          | adverb         | ˌɔːltə'geðə(r) | ˌɔltə'geðər | used for emphasizing that what you are saying is true in every way                             | She looked altogether charming in her white dress.                  |
| immensely           | adverb         | ɪ'mensli       |             | very or very much: used for emphasizing what you are saying                                    | She's an immensely talented singer and one of the best I've seen.   |
| noticeably          | adverb         | 'nəʊtɪsəbli    | 'noutɪsəbli | in a way that is easy to see, hear or feel                                                     | The classroom was noticeably quieter than usual.                    |
| outright            | adverb         | ˌaʊt'reɪt      |             | wholly and completely                                                                          | His behavior wasn't just careless, it was outright dangerous.       |
| practically         | adverb         | 'præktɪkli     |             | almost                                                                                         | The system is practically impossible to deal with most of the time. |
| radically           | adverb         | 'rædɪkli       |             | if something changes radically, it changes completely or in a way that is very noticeable      | Computers have radically changed our lives.                         |
| relatively          | adverb         | 'relatɪvli     |             | in comparison with someone or something similar                                                | Relatively few women become airline pilots.                         |
| remarkably          | adverb         | rɪ'mɑː(r)kəbli | rɪ'markəbli | in a way that is unusual and surprises or impresses you                                        | All the students did remarkably well on their exams this year.      |
| somewhat            | adverb         | 'sʌmwɒt        | 'sʌmwat     | to some degree but not to a large degree                                                       | The situation has improved somewhat during the past year.           |
| utterly             | adverb         | 'ʌtə(r)li      | 'ʌtərli     | completely: often used for emphasizing how bad someone or something is                         | Young children are utterly dependent on their parents.              |