The Work of a Police Dog

0 c

The dog's day starts early at around 5 am but their work doesn't start then. It starts at 11 am. They eat early because the food needs time to give the dog's body energy. For police work, dogs usually need to run around a lot.

1 ____

A police handler always lives with the dog. It's not a nine-to-five job. It's 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The animal starts working after they are one year old. At this time, they can understand and learn what they need to do.

2 ____

There are different parts of the job. The dog helps look for missing people or it helps to find guns or drugs. When there are special events like a visit from the president, the dog can visit the area before to make sure everything is safe.

3 ____

In the evening, the dog can go home and relax; it is the same as other family pets. They can watch TV with their handler or go for a walk in the park.

4 ____

Any police officer can train to work with a dog but they have to have an interview for the job and take an exam. They also have to understand that they will spend all their time with the animal.

5 ____

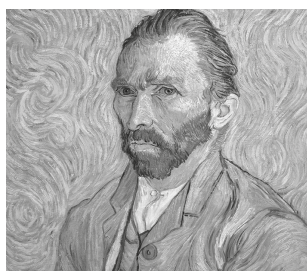

Police dogs finally stop working around the age of eight after all their hard work. Sometimes they stay with their handler and other times they go to a new family.

- a The Job
- b No More Work
- c An Early Start
- d Free Time
